Dear Dr Chen,

I'd like to request an appointment to have something checked. For the past two days I've been getting an intermittent tightness in the centre of my chest. It comes and goes, and I've noticed it's worse when I'm active - it eases when I rest. I haven't fainted or blacked out at any point.

The tightness is still coming on, so I'd rather not leave it. Could I be seen and assessed?

My current medications are unchanged: atorvastatin 40 mg at night, metformin 1000 mg twice daily and ramipril 5 mg once daily. I'm otherwise managing fine at home.

Please let me know the earliest time you can fit me in.

Kind regards,

Peter Lawson
