I started sertraline on 10 August at 25 mg once daily, with a plan to increase to 50 mg. Since starting it I've been feeling nauseated and more restless than usual. I haven't vomited, and I'm not having any thoughts of harming myself.

I wanted to let you know before the planned increase, as I'm not sure whether these effects are expected or whether I should wait before going up to 50 mg. I have the early medication and safety review due with you on 20 August, but I'd appreciate your advice sooner if possible.
